

Vouching

If you don't have proper documentation of your current residence, you can have someone vouch for you on Election Day.

The person vouching for you must be a registered voter in your precinct and is required to sign an oath confirming your address.

Who can vouch

A registered voter who lives in the same precinct

- A registered voter can vouch for up to eight voters
- You cannot vouch for others if someone vouched for you or

A facility staff if you live in a residential facility

- Staff need to show proof of their employment (employee ID badge or staff list) at the polling place
- There is no limit to how many people a staff member can vouch for

If your address can't be confirmed, you may be "challenged" at the polls. You are still able to vote. The election judges at your polling place will have you take an oath of eligibility.
